And Jacob said to Simeon and Levi, Ye have troubled me, to make me to stink among the inhabitants of the land, among the Canaanites and the Perizzites; and I being few in number, they shall gather themselves together against me, and slay me, and I shall be destroyed, I and my house. And they said, Should he deal with our kinsmen as with an harlot? In the foregoing chapter we have an account how the Patriarch Jacob, having left the service of his father-in-law Laban at Padan-Aram, brought his family and substance into Canaan, the land of his nativity, and settled for some time at a city called Salem, under the government of Hamor the Hivite, of whom he purchased a piece of ground as a convenient situation for his Tents and other occasions of his family. DURING his abode in this place, which the Jewish Doctors for good reasons compute to be near ten years, his sons, the elder especially, grew up to manhood, and his daughter Dinah, the only one that he had, was sixteen or seventeen years of age. Whether her mother Leah was living or dead at this time, it doth not appear: but the daughter being grown to maturity, and desirous to see the Fashions of the Country, and to be acquainted with persons of her own sex in those parts, made frequent visits among them, until she came to be well known, and taken notice...
